

FAQ for 3/28/19

If you have been at the Temple recently, you certainly noticed the big fence close to the front entrance, the fence that encloses what used to be the small circle and clergy parking. Perhaps you wondered, “Why does that area need to be fenced off now, when all of the work is being done on the other side of the property?” Great question! It was, of course, a safety issue while unhealthy trees were being removed, but there is also work going on that area currently: our contractors are in the process of relocating the gas lines, the phone lines, and the FIOS lines in order to build in that space without major disruption to our utilities. Meanwhile, many of the nice plantings that were formerly in that area have been transplanted to other areas of the property – see if you can find them in their new locations! Also, enjoy the hardy daffodils that have persevered despite being in the middle of the construction zone – an inspiration to us all!
