

Weekly Update 2.13.2020

Despite the rain this week, the workers were able both to frame the new clergy/classroom addition and to hang protective sheeting, as you can see in the picture below:

With this, we can get a sense of the shape of the addition. We can also get a feel for the size of the playground for our youngest Nursery School students, which will be located between our current building and the new building.

The most anticipated event of the week is the pouring of the concrete that will become the floors of the addition and the floor of the raised walkways on both sides of the addition. The rain has delayed this exciting next step, but the construction team was able to use our brief reprieve from the wet to make it happen. It looks so cool!

As always, please reach out if you have any questions: bptf@templerodefshalom.org.
